

Indian Leadership Education & Development

Principal Certification

The purpose of the I LEAD project is to recruit, educate, and place American Indian educators into administrative positions at schools with high populations of Native American students. Candidates will participate in approximately six blocks of instruction spanning a timeframe of about 24 months. This instruction will result in the award of a master's degree in educational leadership and eligibility for state certification as a K-12 school principal.

A collaborative project of:

Little Big Horn College and the Educational Leadership Program at Montana State University Dept. of Education

Benefits

Frequently Asked Questions

What would happen if I decided not to apply for an administrative position after completing the program?

This I LEAD project requires a payback of one year of service as an administrator at a school serving Native American students for every year of participation or a payback of the funds spent for your participation in I LEAD structured as a student loan.

Do I have to take all the courses at the times specified by cohort?

Although you will have to take all of the courses, you could develop an alternative schedule allowing you to accelerate graduation or slow the pace. Keep in mind, that all course work must be completed by summer of 2030

Can I participate in the MSU classes offered through the I LEAD program, if I am not Native American, but work with Native American students?

The I LEAD program is for those educators that are tribal members themselves or those with parents or grandparents who are tribal members. You may apply to the M.Ed. offered to I LEAD participants, but have to self-fund your own cost of attendance.
